The Winchester Model 72 and the related Model 72A were American bolt-action .22 caliber sporting rifles produced by the Winchester Repeating Arms Company from 1938 to 1959. Available in a number of configurations, the Model 72 was Winchester's first design for a tube magazine-fed rifle. For years dealers had been asking Winchester to make a reasonably priced tubular magazine repeater. Clip-fed magazine repeaters have the objection of a loose magazine to lose and rarely feed the Short, Long and Long Rifle cartridges interchangeably. In 1939 the model 72 was introduced to fill this demand.

Description: Winchester introduced the Model 72 in the Spring of 1938, it was essentially like the earlier Model 69 except for a higher capacity tubular magazine that extended beneath the barrel rather than the box magazine of the Model 69. Winchester manufactured the Model 72 from 1938 to 1942 when production was discontinued so manufacturing efforts could be directed towards wartime needs.

WINCHESTER MODEL 72 - C17723 - United States

I have owned a Winchester 72A for several years and like it a lot. Mine was made late enough for tip off grooves so it's scoped. Had wanted a 69A, but a good one with the grooves never presented itself for a price I was willing to pay. Saturday I was in a gun shop in a town about an hour away and a Winchester 72 was on the rack. Decent shape and for what I thought a pretty reasonable price.
